ROVINE REJOINS SUNFLOWER SYSTEMS AS VICE PRESIDENT OF PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

ARLINGTON, Virginia. February 25, 2008 – Sunflower Systems™, the leading provider of asset management solutions and software, announces today that Valerie Rovine has joined the team again in a new position as Vice President of Professional Development. Ms. Rovine has been providing IT implementation and change management services to Federal and civilian organizations for over 15 years. As Vice President of Professional Development, Ms. Rovine will be responsible for developing and training the Sunflower workforce, as well as educating customers on Sunflower’s capabilities and solutions.

Prior to joining Sunflower, Ms. Rovine served as the Program Director and Change Management Director for the NIH Business System, leading the rollout and operations of the NIH’s Oracle Financials and Sunflower Assets implementations. Before joining NIH, Ms. Rovine served in management roles for Sunflower Systems and BearingPoint, where she provided asset management, ERP, business intelligence and change management solutions. Ms. Rovine holds a bachelor’s degree in psychology from Millersville University.

“We are thrilled to have Valerie back on the team. In the past, Valerie’s leadership, vision and understanding of people and the way they learn provided Sunflower with the ability to recruit some of the best and brightest team members in the industry. With Valerie returning as VP of Professional Development, we will have the framework, infrastructure and expertise needed to ensure that our team members and customers are constantly evolving to meet the next level of challenges,” stated Jeff Polyak, VP of Solutions at Sunflower Systems.
