

Asset Management Services team member, Brian Thompson, of Sunflower Systems Receives President's Award for Continued Support and Dedication to the Mission of NPMA

Sunflower Systems enterprise asset management software and solutions company was well represented at the 2011 National Property Management Association's National Education Seminar by solutions team member, Brian Thompson, for receiving the President's award as a result of constantly supporting and showing dedication to the mission of NPMA.

July 28, 2011 – Brian Thompson of Sunflower Systems received the prestigious NPMA President's award from National President, Carl Iannacone. This award is given by the National Property Management Association's National President each year to a NPMA member that shows great dedication to the association and the property management industry. Mr. Thompson earned this honor through continuous efforts as the NPMA Vice President of Marketing and Communications and through service on the National seminar planning committee which has greatly improved the educational content offerings at each of the regional and national NPMA events.

Sunflower Systems is pleased to support and encourage its employees to actively participate in the National Property Management Association. Staying current with the latest trends in property management helps drive Sunflower Systems enterprise asset management solutions forward and keeps its asset management services and solutions team members knowledgeable of the challenges and regulations that Sunflower Systems clients face.
