

Sunflower Systems Enterprise Asset Management Services Announces Upcoming Training Courses

Sunflower Systems enterprise asset management services released upcoming Sunflower Academy Training Course Dates.

November 17, 2011 – Sunflower Systems enterprise asset management services released upcoming dates for their Sunflower Academy Training courses. Users from the industries of contract property management, federal property management, national laboratory property management, university property management, and other private industries are now able to take advantage of these new courses.

Regularly training staff on the latest functionality within Sunflower Systems enterprise asset management software will ensure that an organization is getting the most value out of the asset management system that was purchased. Sunflower Systems asset management services team ensures that courses such as these are readily available for users to take advantage of.

Functional Foundations Training is scheduled for November 28 – December 2, 2011 in Arlington, VA and will address asset management properties that are fundamental to all aspects of operation to property management. Topics discussed will stem from all Sunflower Assets modules. Students will learn how to use Sunflower Assets to manage and track property from acquisition through disposal. Demonstration and hands-on practice will reinforce the concepts presented during this course.

Key concepts covered include: Lifecycle Asset Management; Sunflower Assets Structure (Core Assets and Interest Assets); Roles and Role-based Application Access; Asset Accountability; Searches and Queries; Asset Creation; Enterprise Asset Management ; Asset Retirement; Administration and Maintenance; and Advanced Asset Management Reporting.

Administration Training is scheduled for December 12-15, 2011 in Arlington, VA and will address the administrative functions that are fundamental to the setup and on-going management of Sunflower Assets. Topics discussed will stem from the Sunflower Assets Administration module but will also address how administrative tasks are related to and affect the modules throughout Sunflower Assets. Students will learn how to use the Administration module to support your property management organization and maintain to the Sunflower Assets database. Demonstration and hands-on practice will reinforce the concepts presented during this course.

Key concepts covered include: Lifecycle Asset Management ; Sunflower Assets Structure (Core Assets and Interest Assets); Roles and Role-based Application Access; Enterprise Asset Management Principles; Administration and Maintenance; Advanced Asset Management Reporting; and Email Notifications.

About Sunflower Systems:

Sunflower Systems provides full enterprise asset management solutions to a broad client base across multiple industries including federal agencies, state and local agencies, government contractors, universities, national laboratories, and private corporations. Sunflower's portfolio of solutions and asset management services enables organizations to improve decision-making, accountability and regulatory compliance for all types of assets including personal property management, contract property management, real property management, IT asset management, materials management, vehicle management and more. For more information, visit:

www.sunflowersystems.com